Methodology

Online survey among BC residents 18 years of age or older: n=1,072.

Respondents were randomly recruited using LEO's online panel.

When

Data collection from October 20-22, 2026

Where available, results are compared to previous waves of research.

Margin of Error

Weighting

Results were weighted according to age, gender, region, and education in order to ensure a representative sample of the population of BC.

Methodology

Significant Differences

↑ / ↓ indicates a significantly higher / lower proportion than the previous wave.

Data in green / red indicates a significantly higher / lower proportion relative to the total.

Note that the October 2025 wave of research was conducted on a sample of eligible voters only. Take caution interpreting wave over wave comparisons.

Rounded Data

The numbers presented have been rounded up. However, the numbers before rounding were used to calculate the sums presented and might therefore not correspond to the manual addition of these numbers.

Conservatives widen their lead as voters firm up their choices ahead of election day

Conservative support continues to strengthen heading into election day. The Conservatives have gained five points since September, rising from 39% to 44%, while NDP support has increased more modestly from 36% to 39%. Meanwhile, Green support has rebounded to 13% after falling to 9% in the previous wave, returning to its September level.

Voting intentions vary across demographic groups, particularly by age and gender. Conservatives lead among residents aged 35 to 54 (48% versus 34% for the NDP), while support is more evenly split between the two parties for 18-34 and 55+). Support is also divided by gender, with Conservatives leading among men (47% versus 35%), while the NDP leads among women (43% versus 41%). Green support is highest among younger residents aged 18 to 34 (20%), compared with just 9% among those aged 55 and older.

With most voters settling on their choices, the final outcome could hinge on turnout, the distribution of support across individual ridings, and the decisions of remaining undecided voters. The Conservatives enter Saturday's election with a clearer lead, while declining voter uncertainty and greater vote certainty suggest limited room for further shifts in support.
